

The Daily Courant.

Tuesday, December 30. 1707.

From the Leiden Gazette, dated Jan. 6.

Legborne, Dec. 16.

Rear-Admiral Sir Thomas Dilkes died on board his Ship in our Road the 13th Instant of a Fever, and was buried the next Day in the Church-yard which the English have without this City. The Squadron of 16 Men of War that were commanded by him are since sail'd for Genoa. Several Tartans from Marseilles and Toulon are arriv'd here; the Masters of which report, that 17 Ships of War were put to Sea from Toulon and would be follow'd speedily by 3 others, to go to meet the Spanish Galleons in Conjunction with a Squadron from Brest: And that by the great Preparations made by the French at Toulon Marseilles and other Places, it was conjectur'd the Siege of Barcelona was design'd.

From the Amsterdam Gazette, dated Jan. 6.

Genoa, Dec. 17. The 14th Instant the Palatine Troops left their Quarters, as did also the Imperial Troops and the Regiment of Bonesana, to embark, the former at Vado the others at Final: And to Day they set Sail for Barcelona under the Convoy of the Squadron of Men of War that came from Legborne.

Amsterdam, Jan. 6. Letters from Milan of the 20th past, confirm the Sailing of the Men of War and Transports with 9 or 10000 Men on board for Catalonia. And add, it was advis'd from Genoa, that Orbitello and St. Stefano in Tuscany belonging to the Crown of Spain had declar'd for King Charles.

'The Antwerp Courant has the 2 following Articles relating to these Succours for King Charles III.'

Final Dec. 17. The blowing Weather, by which 2 Barks with 38 Soldiers were sunk before this Place, being somewhat abated, 5 Battallions of Palatinates began to imbark the 14th Instant. Three British Men of War are already come hither from Genoa to Convoy them to Barcelona. To Morrow we expect several other Battallions that are on the Way from Genoa hither; and because the commanding Officer of these Troops will not put to Sea without a strong Convoy, they will be oblig'd to wait for more Men of War, to secure them against a Squadron of French which 'tis advis'd is cruising in the Height of Antibes.

Milan, Dec. 10. From Genoa we have Advice, that the greatest Part of the Germans who were come into the Neighbourhood of that City, were marching in all Haste for Final, there to imbark. It were to be wish'd there were Shipping ready, to take in the Horse as well as the Foot: For that Service the English and Dutch Ministers at Genoa have bin'd several Vessels, which are fitting up for transporting Horse: This will delay the Departure of those Succours for Barcelona for some Days. The Squadron of Men of War from Legborne, was not arriv'd the 16th of Dec. 'Tis confirm'd that some French Men of War are cruising in the Seas of Provence.

From the Amsterdam Courant, dated Jan. 5.

Turin, Dec. 14. Our Duke has sent Commissioners to the severall Places of his Dominions (as well those of his antient as of his new-acquir'd Provinces) to raise 13300 Men for recruiting and augmenting his Forces, to which every Place is to contribute a certain number: Besides which, Recruits are expected to fill up the 4 foreighn Regiments that are in his Royal Highness's Service. The Court have resolv'd to set to Farm all Imposts and Duties payable to his Royal Highness.

From the Antwerp Courant, dated Decemb. 15.

Turin, Dec. 15, This Week our Duke receiv'd a further Sum of 70000 Pistoles that had been remitted from England to Genoa: Which money is for raising 6 new Regiments, that are already in good Forwardness, and for buying 2000 Horses. Men are kept hard at Work on the Fortifications of Cazal and Suza. Never hitherto have been so great Preparations made here for an early Campaign, as are now. 'Tis reckon'd his Royal Highness will lead into the Field an Army of 40000 Men, among which are counted 10000 Imperialists and 8000 Men of the State of Milan.

From the Amst.Cour.and Leid.Gaz.dated,Jan.5 and 6.

Vienna, Dec. 24. The Recruits for the Emperour's Forces are carry'd on with Success in all the hereditary Countries. Prince Ragotski will not desist from any of his Demands: The Cardinal of Saxe-Zeyts will go back for Hungary after the Holy-days. In a few Days Count Wratislaw will set out for Silesia, to give the finishing stroke to the Execution of the Treaty between the Emperour and the King of Sweden: He will carry with him an Answer from this Court to the Memorial deliver'd by Baron Stralenheim to the Emperour's Commissioners; in which Answer 'tis undertaken to demonstrate, that there is no Ground or Colour for the new Demands of that Minister, nor for his Explanation of the Treaty of Alt-Ranstad, 'Tis confirm'd from divers Parts, that the Turks are making great Preparations of War in order to attack the Muscovites. C. Guido Staremberg refuses to go to serve in Spain, offering rather to quit his Employments.

From the Amsterdam Courant, dated Jan. 5.

Breslau, Dec. 22. The Execution of the Treaty of Alt-Ranstad between the Emperour and the King of Sweden, is for the most Part already perform'd, with Respect to the Restitution of the Protestant Churches and Church-Revenues; and the Commissioners are at present here ready to perfect what remains. Whether the King of Sweden will be satisfied with this; or insist upon the Demand of Baron Stralenheim to have the Liberty of Religion further enlarg'd, out of Regard to the Intervention and Intercession of which Mention is made in the Treaty; a little Time will shew.

From the Antwerp Courant, dated Jan. 6.

Nijmes, Dec. 24. The 22d Instant our Governour sent 120 Dragoons to Anduse, to seize 3 or 400 Camisars that had got together thereabouts and committed great Disorders; but they retiring in Time into pathless Mountains and covert Places, where in all likelihood they are but ill provided with with Suffiaence, Troops are detach'd from several Towns to surround the Mountains, and hunt them out; so that either living or dead they cannot easily escape. The 800 Recruits which this Country was order'd to furnish towards filling up our Troops in Spain, are ready, and next Week are to march by the Way of Gascony for Navarre.

Toulon, Dec. 21. On Thursday last 6 Men of War, 3 Frigates, and 4 arm'd Barks, put to Sea from hence under the Command of M. de Bellefontaine: 'Tis not known on what Service they are bound; but being Victuall'd only for 3 or 4 Weeks, we shall soon hear of them. The Count de Villars hazzards with the greatest Application the fitting out a further Naval Force here; but we cannot yet learn what Expedition the Court has in View.

Paris, Jan. 2. The Court beginning to be apprehensive of new Commotions in the Sevenses, the King has ('tis said) sent Orders to the Intendants in that Part of the Kingdom, to treat the New-Converts with less Severity and Connive at them more than formerly. The Inspectors of the Infantry are gone to the Frontiers, to muster the Forces, his Majesty intending that all the Regiments shall be compleat by the 2d of March and in a Condition to take the Field. 'Tis talk'd some Enterprize will be attempted, if it be found at all feasible, very early in Germany. An Edict is in the Press, by which the Field-Equipage and Table of the Generals and chief Officers of our Armies are very much retrench'd. The 20th past in the Morning, the Duke of Orleans arriv'd at Versailles, to the great Joy of the Court. His Royal Highness had a Conference of 2 Hours with the King, who told him, that he had already caus'd 20000 Pistolets which his Royal Highness had advanc'd for subsisting our Troops during the Siege of Lerida to be repaid, and that he would furnish him with such a Sum of Money and such a Number of Troops for the next Campaign, that he might be able to carry the War into Catalonia early and successfully. His Majesty has made a great Promotion of General Officers of the Armies in the Netherlands and on the Upper Rhine.

Paris, Jan. 2. The King has receiv'd from Spain, the News of the taking of Morella; which is the more welcome because (as is given out at Court) it will secure Arragon and Valencia, and be a great Obstacle to the Enemy in making Excursions or other Attempts.

London, Dec. 30. Last Night Tho. Fenwick an Elder Porter belonging to the East-India Company, was stab'd in Billiter-Lane in Leadenhall-street by one Carroll an Irishman, of which Wound he instantly Died, and for which the said Carroll was Committed to Newgate.

Letters from Portsmouth of the 28th advise, that the Outward-bound Ships remain still at Spithead; that 2 Dutch Men of War were arriv'd there from Holland with 6 Galleys bound for Lisbon; and that the Ships bound from Canarys, Jamaica, &c. with many Coasters bound Eastward were preparing to Sail under a Convoy. The Alexander, Captain Coram, fell foul of the Tilbury Man of War (which put into Portsmouth) at Sea in their passage from Lisbon; the Alexander immediately sunk, but Captain Coram and all his Men were saved.
